NASA Awards College $25 Million Grant

The Oklahoma State University College of Education, Health and Aviation was awarded a $25 million grant from NASA Johnson Space Center’s Office of Education. The five-year grant will fund a variety of science, technology, engineering and math (STEM) activities for under-represented students in grades kindergarten through 12, as well as higher education, across eight states in the central U.S. and nationally. OSU is the leading institution in activities supporting NASA’s goal to improve STEM instruction and increasing student and public engagement. The OSU College of Education, Health and Aviation has worked with NASA Centers across the country on several NASA Education Projects, including Teacher in Space and Teaching from Space, Explorer Schools, Digital Learning Network and INSPIRE.
